Global Warming, The Biggest Scam of the 21st Century...so far.

Learn Why Today's Billionaires Are Placing Huge Bets on Global Cooling.

Don't Be Fooled by Their Misdirection
Tactics about “Climate Change.” They Don't Want You in on This Game...Until They're Ready to Sell.

Most investors don't associate investing with Global Warming (or climate change or whatever title they're calling it these days).

And the powers that be (TPTB) are glad you don't make that connection.

You see, the Wall Street "Club" uses its power and money to publish anything they desire. And they'll use any and every media on the planet to prove their point.

Their thought process is simple.

They give you, the average investor, "Proof" of Global Warming and you'll invest in companies that offer solutions to the problems.

Unfortunately, many of these companies are a scam.

Their real purpose is to fill the pockets of select politicians who work closely, behind the scenes, with Wall Street banksters. It also allows politicians to pass new laws so they can raise out taxes.

Scientists, experts, and politicians (who shout about how global warming is destroying the planet) are no different than most Wall Street analysts.

They'll say anything for the right price.

So, while the public focuses on Global Warming, the Big Money is already positioning themselves to profit from Global Cooling.

That's right...I said Global Cooling.

Before we get into how to profit with the banksters over Global Cooling, check out how some recent “Climate Change” scams have gouged us.

Startup Solar Disasters

Do you remember Solyndra?

It was a Silicon Valley startup in 2009 and was the forerunner in solar energy. “Experts” called it a game changer for the American public.

However, in less than two years it collapsed and left taxpayers on the hook for over $535 Million in Federal Guarantees.

Solyndra was a scam linked to certain investors who were heavily connected with the White House and the Energy Department. You can read who all the players were (HERE).

It’s also one of numerous failures under Obama’s disastrous $80 Billion “Clean-Technology” program.

Another disaster was electric-car-battery company “A123” which also went bankrupt.

Taxpayers only had to eat another $129 Million (They originally won a grant for $249 Million but called it quits before they used the full amount). (LINK)

The list of failures is extensive but here's the common denominator.

Besides connections to political favors, these bankruptcies all had one thing in common. They all claimed to have the cure for global warming.

Are you making the connection yet?

It all goes back to a famous Wall Street Adage...

Follow the Money

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that we taxpayers always get screwed on these deals. At the same time, certain ~~thieves~~ investors, along with their political connections, are walking away with Billions.

If you want to see who profits the most simply "Follow the Money."

Wall Street and Washington have been in bed together for over 100 years and that's not about to change anytime soon.

But there's a way to beat these criminals at their own game. And in many ways, the small investor has an edge over the institutional crowd.

However, you need to understand how cycles work. Then get in on them in the early stages.

One of the Biggest Commodity Cycles of Our Lifetime is Underway...

Here's something you won't hear in the Lame Stream Media: NASA has admitted that the world's going to get colder-not warmer. They also reported in 2016 that Antarctic sea ice recently reached a new record maximum.

When the world cools down commodities become more valuable.

Especially food.

In addition to food stocks, there are many other ways to invest in a major commodity bull market cycle.

The most obvious group is agricultural stocks including Agrium, Mosaic, DuPont, Archer Daniels Midland, Bunge Limited, FMC Corp, Del Monte...just to name a few.

Fertilizer giants like Potash (POT) are still down over 70% from their highs in 2008.

*Note, we're not an investment advisory firm so we can't say which stocks will be the best performers.

However, what we do know is, throughout history commodity prices have been reliably cyclical.

They rise and fall significantly over periods lasting 2-10 years. That's because when prices go down, producers go out of business. Eventually supply shrinks to the point where there's a shortage, and then prices rise.

New producers eventually start up, and finally there's an oversupply. Then prices fall, and the cycle starts over.

Wash, rinse, repeat!

When it comes to reversing a cycle such as commodities, the "Smart Money" ALWAYS moves ahead of the crowd.

That's why TPTB want to keep you worried about Global Warming. It allows them to position themselves for the cooling down effect to kick in. At the same time, they don't want you to know that the cycle in commodities is on an upward slope.

A Change of the Guard is At Hand

On a more sobering note, history proves that empires fall when the earth goes into a cooling period.

"Cooling periods" result in crop failure. Then comes famine, disease and plagues. When it gets worse you'll see war, starvation, political upheaval, and major regime change.

Not a pretty picture.

It also sets the stage for a New Sherriff to come to town.

Take a wild guess as to who's the biggest commodity producer in the world?

If you said China, Congratulations!

Not only are they the biggest producer, they are by far the biggest consumer and hoarders of most major commodities. (Think 1.4 Billion consumers)

Since the 1990s, they've been stockpiling food, copper, tin, GOLD (and anything else you can think of) as if their lives depended on it.

What do they know that we don't?

Ironically (or maybe it's on purpose) they've also been one of the biggest promoters of Global Warming in the world. They also suffer from some of the worst pollution problems on the planet.

China's also been rebuilding the ancient "Silk Road" as a means of connecting trade from the eastern shores of Asia to London.

It's called the Belt Road Initiative (BRI) and you can read about it in our archives. (September 2017 newsletter)

China is not messing around. They know it's only a matter of time before they take over as king of the World Reserve Currency. They also know that commodities will play a key role in the transition.

Position Yourself to Profit

Start with one simple idea: Take advantage of the fact that commodity prices are at their lowest level in nearly 50 years.

Then, realize that 99% of investors aren't paying attention to them.

Don't limit your research to agriculture stocks. Commodities are a huge sector including metals, mining, oil, minerals etc.

Check back with us next month where we'll narrow down the sectors that are most undervalued.

(Hint! Hint! Silver mining stocks).
